

Yemen situation overview

The prolonged conflict has left half of Yemen's population in desperate need of humanitarian aid. Vulnerable groups, such as internally displaced persons, children, women, the elderly, individuals with disabilities and mental health conditions, marginalized communities, and those affected by conflict-related injuries, continue to bear the brunt of the crisis.

Among countries most vulnerable to the climate emergencies, climate change-induced disasters will further exacerbate health vulnerabilities in Yemen. While the health needs are urgent in Yemen, the funding shortage is chronic. WHO needs to support prioritization of essential services that are equally needed to ensure health for all.

Inter-cluster people in need

 | 18.2 million

people need multisectoral humanitarian aid

 | 17.8 million

people require health assistance (50% of them children)

 | 7 million

people need mental health and psychosocial support

 | 12.4 million

people lack sufficient access to safe water sources

 | 55%

of health facilities function at full capacity

 | 17.6 million

people are estimated to experience severe food insecurity

 | 540,000

children under age 5 need lifesaving treatment for severe wasting

(54,000 with severe acute malnutrition with medical complications)

Source: Humanitarian Needs Overview Yemen – 2024.